MILLIONS TO SAVE TIME!

The Great Railway Tunnel Beneath the City of Baltimore.

The Only Line of the Kind in the World. Twenty-five Minutes to be Saved at the Enormous Cost of More Than $7,000,000. Elertricity Against Steam

[Special Correspondence.]
BALTIMORE, May 28.—Think of spending $7,500,000 to save 25 minutes' time! Does it not make your head ache?

People who do not think this is a fast world will smile incredulously at this statement, but it is true. This is why what is known as the Baltimore Belt Line milroad was planned five years ago -so that trains of the Baltimore and Ohio railway could go rushing underneath the heart of the city on their way between New York and Washington without being ferried across the Patapsco river. True, the Belt Line gives the mil-road company an opportunity to secure passengers from stations in different parts of the city, but this was only a minor consideration. The question of time was the main issue, and this out-lay of money representing 4½ years of labor and the construction of what is the only line of its kind in the world was the result of a quiet conference which agreed that this time must be saved at any cost.

At the conference was a short, stont, black eyed man, with a determination which showed itself plainly on his features. He was the father of the plan to under the city and lay tracks many feet beneath some of the largest build-ings in Baltimore. The idea of Mr. John B. McDonald was at first received with amazement, but by facts and figures he proved the possibility of the work, and its progress has since shown his ability and judgment, which may be called into play if he receives the contract to construct New/York's proposed underground railway from the Battery to Harlem, on which his company is now figuring.

The Bakimore Belt Line, as it i familiarly, termed, is less than cight miles long, but its feature is the tunnel work. One tunnel is 8,146 feet long and the other nearly 400 feet, or in all about 1% miles. It begins at Camden station, in the southern part of the city, and extends north and northeast under one of the main business streets, at some points the top of the arch being 40 feet below the pavement and at other points as near as 10 feet to the surface. line emerges into a deep cut in the northern suburb and thence winds around in a long curve to a junction with the main road just beyond the city's limits. The excavation for this great hole in the ground is over 30 feet wide and 26 to 30 feet high, as it is large enough to allow two trains of the largest sized cars to pass each other between its bailet being being the pass of the largest sized cars to pass each other between its bailet being the size of tween its brick lined walls.

Passengers who go through it may be interested in knowing that every foot of the road, including the tunnel, cost just $225—rather expensive when you come to puzzle over it.

But what makes this Belt Line so especially interesting to engineers, inventors, railroad men and electricians is that the long passenger and freight trains over it are to be hauled by enormous electric locomotives. In scientific phrase its motive power will be the trough conduit system.

It is certainly a funny looking loco-motive is the first impression. Apparently it is a little house on big wheels. with an ordinary locomotive tender at each end, on each of which are a bell and a headlight, but the curious and wonderful mechanism by which this unseen force is controlled at the will of the engineer needs careful covering from the elements, and this form is considered to give it the best protection.

The motorman with one hand pulls a small lover, not unlike a steam engine throttle valve. But no steam hisses. Sithe treath the machine begins to move. As the speed increases one notes the peculiar whirring or buzzing sound made by the trolley motor of common use, but it is not so loud, although now the apparatus ratus may be rushing along at the rate of 35 miles an hour. By degrees the man at the lever pushes it back and pulls at another handle. This causes the familiar hissing of the airbrake, with which he controls the motion after the current is shut off as easily as does a steam engineer, but there are no redhot furnace doors to open, no gushing of steam from the safety valve, no soft coal to throw into a huge firebox glowing at a white heat. All these are absent, but still there is the marvelous force which has pulled the train of seven or eight Pullman cars, representing a dead weight of 300 tons and over, up a grade which would require a high steam pressure on a mogul engine.

This is what is expected of these machines, which will weigh 95 tons each and have motors equal to 640 horsepow-or, enough to withstand a current of 700 electric "volte." This power, it is cal-culated, will allow them to haul passengers and freight trains through this tun-nel at a speed of 35 and 15 miles per Sour respectively. Near the junction of the Belt load and main line the steam power motors will replace the electric noters which are especially intended to operate in and near the tunnel, so that it will be free from smoke and goses.

it will be free from smoke and gases.

To generate this enormous power requires five engines and 12 steam borlers, giving in all 8.000 horsepower and also supplying current to 1,000 incandescent tamps, by which the long tunnel is to be made at all times bright as boundar.

The current for the motors is conveyed in large copper cables insulated from the elements and firmly joined to the trough system already described. The steam plant is inclosed in a large brick building in the southern part of the city. It is completed, as well as most of the electric system, so that the men who are now making the first practical trial of electric against steam power in railroad use expect to have the new system in operation in a few days.

TRIAL TRIP TO HEAVEN.

A Young Girl Predicted Her Own Death Three Years Ahead.

On Thursday Miss Annie E. Bennett, daughter of Rev. A. J. Bennett of Hinton, W. Va., died of consumption, aged 24 years. She was a member of the Primitive Baptist church, of which her father is pastor, and was a most devout young lady. Three years age, just as it was becoming apparent that the dread disease had fastened itself upon her, she made the statezacut to several of her fellow students at the Baptist academy that she would die on May 23, 1895.

that she would die on May 23, 1895.

The statement was recorded by several of the girls as a joke, and that it might not be efficied one of them scratched it on the woodwork of the room in which it was made at the school. An examination shows the date to be still quite plain and distinct. Miss Bennett had stated to her friends that she had been warned and given to know the date of her death by a vision when she was walking alone in the wood near the school in broad daylight. A few hours before death Miss Bennett became apparently lifeless, the breath leaving her body. After a short time she regained consciousness and stated that she had been to beeven and had conversed with her brother, Arthur Bennett, and her sister, Mrs. Lida Latab, both of whom have been dead for several years. This conversation was detailed, and a description of heaven was given these about the bedside. She died smiling, and the last words were that she hoped those about her might be allowed to join her soon.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
